

All That We Share

It's easy to put people in boxes.
There's us.
And there's them.
The high earners.
And those just getting by.
Those we trust.
And those we try to avoid.
There's the new Danes.
And those who have always been here.
The people from the countryside.
And those who have never seen a cow.
The religious.
And the self-confident.
There are those we share something with.
And those we don't share anything with.
Welcome.
I am going to ask you some questions today. Some might be a bit personal - but I hope you will answer them honestly.
Who in this room was the class clown?
Who are stepparents?
And then suddenly there's us. We who believe in life after death.
We who have seen UFO's. And all of us who love to dance.
We who have been bullied.
And we who have bullied others.
And then there's us, the lucky ones, who have had sex this past week.
We who are brokenhearted.
We who are madly in love.
We who feel lonely.
We who are bisexual.
And we who acknowledge the courage of others.
We who have found the meaning of life. And we who have saved lives. And then there's all of us who just love Denmark.
So maybe there's more that brings us together than we think.
